BOSTON TAKES THE FIRST

That Club Bunches Its Hits, but Is Helped to Victory by the Umpire.

Chicago Keeps Up Its Record, While New York Loses to Detroit, and Washington to Pittsburg-Base-Ball Notes.

Boston's high-priced team of players made its first appearance of the season in Indianapolis yesterday, and with a crippled pitcher in the box, wen a game from the home club, but was materially assisted in doing so by good luck and bed umpiring. A crowd of 2,500 saw the game, which was quite exciting. The Boston's had good luck in the first inning and made two runs, the umpire gave them a run in the third, and they batted out four runs by nice hitting in the seventh and eighth. Up to the seventh inning Moffets pitched a nice game, the Bostons' batting previous to that being almost altogether of the lucky order, but in the last two innings the visitors faced him they batted him for three singles, two tripples and a three-bagger. The middle flager of Clarkson's hand was very sore, it having been knocked out of joint in the last Pittsburg game. Nevertheless he pitched a great game, and by taking advantage of the weakness of the home batters held them down to eleven hits. The home players should have batted him harder than they did, considering the condition he was in, but this is the only point of their play that can be criticised. The fielding was very sharp—the work of Hines and Denny being quite brilliant. The former made seven catches-several of them very difficult-and two good throws, one to third base, and one home. Denny had no less than ten chances at third base and accepted all of them. One of his plays, in the second inning, aroused great enthusiasm. Johnson was on secand, when Brown drove a slow ball toward third. Denny picked it up and after making a motion as if to throw to first, shot the ball to second and caught Johnson. Another sharp play by the home fielders occurred in the first inning, when, with Nash on third and Morrill on first the latter started to steal second. Myers shot the ball to Bassett, forth between bases. Glasscock, who had got the ball, kept his eye on Nash, and as soon as the latter got a short distance away from third the bail was sent like a flash to Denny and the runner put out. And what was still more, Morrill was kept at first base. The fielding of the iome team throughout was, in fact, of the That which spoiled what might otherwise bave been a very enjoyable game, was the inexcusably bad work of umpire Decker. His calling of balls and strikes was quite fair, and two or three close decisions which he had to make at second base were also given correctly, although two of them were against the home team; yet he made one bad blunder in the second inning, and because the crowd hooted and hissed him for it for several innings-in which they were almost justifiable—he became angry, and in the eighth rendered a decision which, some cities, would have precipitated riot. The decision in the second which caused so much indignation was in failing to call a runner for running out of line in order to avoid being put out. Brown was on second when Burdock hit sharply to Denny. frown was almost upon Denny when he got the all, and when the latter turned to touch him out Brown wheeled and ran at an angle out of is way. Denny then turned and threw Burdock out at first base. Everyone supposed Brown would be called out. Brown himself only trotted home, and Esterbrook had plenty time to throw to the plate out him out, but Morrill, who had been tching the umpire's action, shouted to Brown to touch the plate; and to everybody's surprise the umpire refused to call Brown out. The erowd hissed him severely, the grand stand tak-ing part in it for the first time this season. Decker stood with a sneer on his face, but was dently worried by the exhibition of feeling. In the eighth inning his decision was even werse, all the circumstances considered, but it may have been due wholly to the fact that he did not see the play. If it was not that, it was purely perverseness. Bassett was on first, when Esterbrook hit to Nash, who threw to second for a double play, but Burdock overthrew first. As Esterbrook rounded first on his way to second Morrill sprang squarely in front of him. Morrill had given a hurried glance at the umpire before he sprang in Esterbrook's way, and it may be that Decker did not see it, and such an action was certainly not to be expected of a man of Morrill's reputation. Ester-brook seemed to have lost his head, and when Denny, who had run all the way over from the soaching line, ordered him to run on down to second he paid no attention to him, Most of he crowd were watching the ball at the time Morrill got in Esterbrook's way, else there might have been trouble for the Bostons captain. Yet it is not at all improbable that the ollision was accidental on his part, for it was done too openly to appear intentional. He and Esterbrook stood for a couple of moments trying to pass each other. However the intention may have been, it clearly was not the fault of the runner, and entitled him to second base. In the first inning Kelly, Wise and Morrill got rather feeble hits, just outside the reach of fielders, and these, with the aid of Nash's base on balls, yielded Boston two runs. In the second, Brown reached first while Denny putting out Johnson at second latter having made a two-bagge stole second, and after circling around Denny. with the ball in his hand, was permitted by the ampire to score a run. But for this decision, the home team would have tied the score in the fourth, as Denny knocked the ball over the left-field fence in the first inning, and Seery, in the fourth, made a hit, stole second, went to third en Bassett's sacrifice and scored on Kelly's wild throw. The home team batted Clarkson hard at times, but sent the ball right at some fielder. Nash, at third, was particularly instrumental in stopping hard hits.

In the eighth, however, Denny made a single and Seery followed with a home run far over the right field fence. The umpire's decision in the Morrill-Esterbrook matter then cut off further runs. In the seventh the Bostons batted out three runs on Hornung's twobagger, Johnson's three-bagger, and Burdock's and Clarkson's singles. Nash's single, a sacrifice and Hornung's two-bagger yielded Boston's run in the eighth. The score was: INDIANAPOLIS.

DETROIT, Mich., May 10 .- About 2,000 people witnessed a comedy of errors to-day, in which the honors were easy. The grounds were slipp ery and the temperature hovered close to the freezing point, conditions which were largely responsible for many of the errors made. Titcomb had little or no command of the ball, and was poorly supported by Mur-phy in the second, when the first run was scored on Titeomb's failure to stop a low grounder, two passed balls and a wild pitch. Hanlon probably saved the game by a remarkable one-handed catch of Richard-son's long fly in the sixth, when two men were on bases. Score:

PITTSBURG. 2; WASHINGTON, 1. PITTSBURG, May 19 .- The in-field work of the Washington and local teams in the initial game of the series was very good. The play on both sides was very sharp, and the 1,500 people had no cause to kick, though they did so on the umpire once. Whitney went into the box for the Senators and stayed seven innings. His retirement was caused by a hot liner from Kuehne's bat, which struck him in the right breast beneath his arm. He doubled Dalrymple on the play, but was too badly hurt to go into the box and Gilmore pitched the remaining inning. The features of the game were the fielding of Dalrymple, Cliff Carroll and Daly. Martin Sullivan wrote President Nick Young giving long account of the encounter between himself and sterbrook in this city.

Young Chamberlain, of the Louisvilles, is the first man to pitch both right and left-handed in a cham-pionship game. He accomplished this feat in a game against the Kansas City club and kept them down to Detroit Tribune: Manager Watkins, Richardson, White and some of the Washington players held an informal blue-rock shooting tournament at Highland Park yesterday morning. Richardson literally mowed the birds. He broke 20 of 26.

One of the most remarkable things in base ball is that Twitchell has not had a fielding put-out or assist in eight consecutive games, and but two chances since the team opened the season in Detroit, May 1. This record certainly has never been surpassed. Messrs. J. J. Droham and J. C. Morse, representing the Boston Globe and Herald, respectively, are traveling with the club. The Boston papers print the most complete account of games of any papers in the country, sometimes devoting two columns of introluction to a single game. Kelly, like Anson, finds it hard work to keep his temper when the crowd gets noisy. But Kelly, like the crowd, only looks at one side of things. Yesterday's crowd was the noisiest Indianapolis has turned out this year, and the umpire's decisions were likewise the most aggravating.

There was general indignation last night over Decker's work, the opinion being freely expressed that his actions on the field indicated that he had no use for the Indianapolis club. The fact that he favored the Philadelphias at critical points on Wednesday is also against Decker.

Galvin is very successful this year in catching men napping off first base. Hanlon and Anson have al-ready fallen victims to his trick, which consists of bringing his arm to the rear as if about to pitch and bending his head as though ready to deliver the ball; then, instead of giving the ball an in-shoot over the plate, he fires it to first, apparently without looking. Dunlap says because he receives a big salary people expect him to play perfect ball, which he ought not to be expected to do, for the reason that there is no player living who does not make mistakes. He thinks the Pittsburg newspapers and crowds are the most exacting in the country, and that this fact has a bad effect upon the players, who fear to take a chance where there is a prospect of an error.

New York Sun: Here is a sample of a large number of letters which have been received, both at this office and the Polo grounds: "I have noticed that several ladies on the stand at the Polo grounds wear colors of the New York team, maroon and white. My wife being an enthusiast on the subject, and having attended every game of importance last year, and all the games of this year so far, would like to know where she can procure one of these badges." Badges, representing the colors of the New York club, will be on sale at the Polo grounds, beginning with the first game after the club returns home.

Swift would have probably won the first race, the McCampbell handicap, had it not been for his stumbling just before the start, turning a clean somersault and wounding his rider, Turner. Freeman was suspended for his peculiar riding of Laurel in the last race, and it seemed strange that bets were not declared off. ANGOLA, Ind., May 19 .-- The fourth annual commencement of the Normal College, at this place, occurred on Thursday. Six graduates in the musical department and fourteen in the other departments of the school received their diplomas from President L. M. Sniff. A large attendance of interested visitors vitnessed the exercises, which were very creditable throughout. The class address by Prof. L. R. Williams is worthy of especial mention for its excellence and appropriateness to the occasion.

KOKOMO, Ind., May 19 .- This week the Board of Trade closed a contract with the Rockford Bit Company, of Rockford, Ill., securing to Kokomo a very desirable industry, representing a cash capital of $75,000, furnishing employment to seventy-five workmen, mostly skilled laborers. Work on the structure will proceed at once, and the plant will be in operation by Aug. 1.

THE DESTROYING FLOODS.

The Water Falling at Quincy and the Worst Believed Past-Destitute Refugees.

QUINCY, Ill., May 19 .- The river has fallen three and one-half inches, and it is now believed the worst of the flood is over. Quincy, being located on very high ground from the river, no damage whatever has been done in the city, excepting to factories and buildings under the bluff along the river bank. By reason of additional breaks in the levees, above and below the city, the water inside the embaukment is now on a level with the river, and nearly every of ground protected by is flooded. Depots of supplies have been established by the committee of Quincy at various points throughout the flooded district, from which provisions, clothing, etc., are being distributed. Investigations made to-day show that previous reports of want and destitution have not been exaggerated, hundreds of families requiring immediate essistance. The people of Quincy have responded nobly to the call for aid, several thousand dollars having been subscribed, and the work of relief has only been fairly commenced. To-day Governor Alger, of Michigan, telegraphed the relief committee to draw on him at sight for

Sr. Louis, Mo., May 19.—Late advices from up-the-river points say the flood is increasing at various places, and that there is much suffering among the people driven from their bomes by the raging waters. At Louisians, Mo., the river has risen an additional six inches, and another break has occurred in the Sny levee, making the eighth, flooding more of the bottoms and compelling many people who still re-mained in their homes to fly for their lives.

The Suits Against Mrs. Parnell. NEW YORK, May 19 .- Mrs. Delia Parnell, mother of the Irish leader, arrived from England yesterday. In regard to the suits brought against her by relatives in Philadelphia, asking that she be adjudged to secount for $7,580 of trust funds, as reported last night, she was interviewed to-day. She said that the trouble was an old one; that she had paid them thousands of dollars; that she owes them nothing, and that the suits are brought merely to annoy her; that she has a counter-claim against Mr. Stewart for the occupancy of her property, rent free, for years, which will more than overbalance his claim. She declares that she will fight the suits.

SUMMIT, N. J., May 19 .- Robert T. Arnold, one of the wealthiest and most prominent residents of Colonel Thompson Not Ill.

They Thrive in the Warm Part of the Arctic Regions-Some Interesting Figures. New York Mail and Express. "The best sealskins come from the comparatively warm part of the Arctic regions." "From the warm parts? I thought the seal liked ice and snow," inquired the reporter. "The fur seal," replied the furrier, "likes cool weather and water, but he does not like ice or snow. The fur seal seeks his Arctic home in the summer and leaves it on the approach of winter for warmer latitudes. The fur seal is not very plentiful, but the hair seal is found almost everywhere. The value of the two skins varies -the fur seal is worth twenty times as much as the skin of the bair seal.

The inhabitants of the Arctic regions make lothing and tents of the skin of the hair seal. The hide of the hair seal, which is secured of the coasts of Labrador in large numbers, is used for reticules, sealskin shopping-bags, etc., and coupled with monkey skins, they help to make a common grade of kid glove. The fur seal is gradually being exterminated, and sealskin is getting more expensive every year. This is caused by there being no laws to protect them, and they are being killed all the year round. In the north the fur seal is confined to two limited localities, both in Behring sea, The catch on the American side is limited to 100,000 year, and on the Russian to 40,000. This latter is sublet to the American company. Thus the whole of the fur business is virtually in the hands of a single monopoly, and it is estimated that not over 5 or 10 per cent. more sealskins than this is furnished by all the rest of the world. The American company is restricted by act of Congress not to kill more than 100,000 seals every year. The result of this law has been that in a few years there will be an enormous number of seals in Behring sea. For some time they have seemed to understand the law and have been coming to the Yankees for protection. No one who saw a sealskin in its raw state would believe that a beautiful coat could be made from it. It is an ugly-looking affair, and the soft fur is covered over by a hard, rough, heavy coat

A Drummer Story.

San Francisco Chronicle. They were two drummers in different lines and they were chummy. There is a great deal of bonhomie about drummers, even when they are in the same line. But what they say of and to one another when they are traveling the same route is different from what they say about one another in their reports to the house they are traveling for. However, there's one thing about the drummer, he is not ashamed of his name. If they called "commercial travelers" in England "drummers" they would resign in a body. Such is the dignity of commerce in Eng-land. Those two drummers were traveling the same route. They had a long stretch of unfruitful country to drive over, and they had not taken enough grub with them. So when they reached a little tumbledown hostelry on the road they were very hungry. There was nothing in the shape of fresh meat to be had, no eggs, nor anything except hard bread. Finally one of them said.

"Haven't you got anything in the shape of canned meats?" The host had. He brought out a tin and the drummers' mouths watered as they watched him pry it open. He laid it before them. One of them took it in his hand and immediately held it off as far as he could, while he closed his nostrils hard.

"What in thunder is this?" he said. The other drummer took it and looked at the "For Heaven's sake, don't say anything. We've got to eat it. This is the brand of canned goods I'm selling." To the drummers' credit be it said they both ate it. What happened to them afterward they are silent about.

Private Opinions of Chicago Editors. Pittsburg Dispatch. A gentleman who is not a politician by pro-lession, but who is constantly in contact with the foremost Republicans of Chicago and the West generally, was in Pittsburg a few days ago, and, on the understanding that his name should not be mentioned, summed up the Republican campaign so far as follows: "I am a Blaine man. That is, I voted for Biaine, and would vote for him again if he were to be a candidate. I admire him intensely, but I do not believe that he is the man for the race this year. It is not so much my judgment which induces me unaided to believe this, as it is the consensus of opinion of the Blaine men of the West, of Illinois, of lows, of Kansas, California, Wisconsin and other States through which I have traveled during the last three months. I know a score of devoted Blaine men, leaders in their party, who privately confess that they do not think Blaine will be stronger this year than in 1884. Slaine may be nominated, indeed I think that it is very likely that he will be, but the West will not come into the convention yelling for the man from Maine. "To-day I cannot see, and a number of Chicago editors have admitted to me that they are unable to predict with any confidence, whom the West will crystalize upon. There is an impression in the highest Republican councils west of Chicago that Depew could be relied upon to carry New York. But an equally atrong impression exists in the same quarter that his connection with a great railroad corporation would be simply ruinous to his chances in the West. I think, all the same, if the right man turns up that the Republican party has a good fighting chance, and as far as I have seen in the course of several journeys through the Western States, the Ret are slightly puzzled about a candidate, but ready and eager to enter the battle."

How Massachusetts Stands. Interview with Hon. J. D. Long.

"Then you think Mr. Blaine will be nomi nated!" was asked "No, I don't think he is a candidate. I have dmired Mr. Blaine very much and regarded him as the leader of the party, but I have enough respect for him to believe that when he wrote his Florence letter ne meant that he did not want to run. His friends must take it in that way in any event, and, I think, go to Chicago considering him out of the field, and determined to consult together and nominate the best pos-sible candidate."

"Will Massachusetts have any choice?" "In the sense of having any decided candidate to push in preference to any one else, I think not. I have talked to some of the delegates and found, with a warm feeling for Blaine in the first place, that they are more disposed to study the qualifications of the candidates than to push forward the claims of any one in particular. Mr. Sherman they think an able man, who deserves well of his party. They are pleased with Gresham and Allison and Harrison, and they have no set or positive objections to any of the leading candidates. They are in good position, as a matter of fact, to nominate the best man, and that is what they are going to Chicago to

The Punishment of a "Gentleman." Pall Mall Gazette.

George Skelton Fitzpatrick Molyneux, who was charged at the Marylebone Police Court with assaulting his wife, is a "gentleman." He attacked his wife with his fists, she seized the tongs to defend herself; he threw her down and wrenched them from her, dislocating and fracturing her fingers in so doing. He then threat-ened to kill her with a knife. He had frequently assaulted her. This is what the prosecutrix said. Her brother, a surgeon, stated that she having left him on account of his violence, the prisoner had sent for her, saying he was ill. She went to him, whereupon he locked the room door and said he would kill her unless she came back to live with him. The prisoner, he said. 'would not work." The wife swore that since their marriage, eighteen months back, she had "had to support" her husband. This "gentle-man" was educated at Sandhurst for the army.

Decollete Corsages.

New York World. The newest decollete corsages from Paris are apt to make one stare at first sight, being nothing more than mere corselets with a pair of straps. But in reality they are not as bad as they lock, for with them comes a mass of tulle or silk gauze which renders them perfectly modest and proper. This gauze is draped over the shoulders like a Marie Autoinette fichu, and then the little apolety for a bodice is put on, the drapery taking the place of the upper part of the sorsage, and the deep waistband and straps hold it in place. Sometimes this tulle is spangled with gold, steel or copper, and a fancy is to have it of different hue from the dress; es, for example, an apple-green gown has the tulie of pale rose; a blue one has gauze of gold color, and a black gown is finished with tulle the shade

Grant and Jewell.

Springfield Republican. A story which has probably never been in print is told on the authority of Henry Wilson as to how Grant succeeded in getting the resignation of Postmaster-general Jewell, of his Cab-inet. The story runs that Grant and Jewell were alone together talking over matters, when, without any previous suggestions of the subject, the President said to his Cabinet adviser: "Jewell, how do you suppose your resignation would look written out?" Jewell, thinking the question a pleasantry of Grant's, said he would write it and see. "All right," said Grant, "you just take some paper and write it down and see how it looks. Jewell wrote and handed the paper to Grant. The latter looked at it a moment and replied: "That looks well. I will accept that." He was in earnest and Jewell was out of the

Dr. Arnold on the Tractarians.

London Truth. There is a passage in a famous letter which Dr. Arnold wrote during the early days of the Tractarian movement which accurately and admirably describes the sentiments entertained by Liberals toward the Tories and the Unionists respectively: "My feelings toward a Roman Catholic are very different from my feelings toward a Newmanite, because I think the one a fair enemy and the other a treacherous one. One is a Frenchman in his uniform, within his own præsidia; the other is a Frenchman dis-guised in a red coat, and holding a post within our præsidia for the purpose of betraying it. I should honor the first and hang the second."

Good Advice.

Philadelphia Inquirer. It is timely to commend to the attention of the Methodist members of the conference in New York the words of counsel of that wise and good man, John Weslsy, the founder of Methodism, and whose memory they all revere. He Condemn no man for not thinking as you think.

Let everyone enjoy the free liberty of thinking for himself. Let every man use his own judgment, since every man must give an account of himself to God. Abhor every approach in any kind of degree to the spirit of prosecution. If you cannot reason or persuade a man into the truth, never attempt to force him into it. If love will not compel him, leave him to God, the Judge of all.

Beaconsfield and Thackeray. ndon Truth. The Star tells us that "a Rothschild looms largely in the pages of 'Coningsby' as Sidonia."
This is nonsense, for Sidonia was a purely ideal character and had not a single Rothschild characteristic about him, except vast wealth. No such man ever lived as Sidonia, whose material and intellectual extravagances were ruthlessly satirized by Thackeray in the inimitable "Codlingsby," a parody which greatly irritated Lord Beaconsfield, for, after nursing his wrath for nearly five and thirty years, he attempted to retaliate upon Thackeay by in-

It Didn't Come Off.

Boston Herald. The widely-circulated report that the Wayside Inn, made famous by Longfellow, has been sold at auction, is not correct. The story probably originated from the Herald's statement that it was announced to be sold last week. The auction came off, but the sale didn't, no satisfactory bid having been received. This may not be poetry, but it is true.

A Word Painting of a Group of Three.

Syracuse Journal. It was a terse and truthful characterization of the attitude of the various political parties on the saloon question, in the anti-saloon conference last week, that "the Democratic party is the party of 'won't;' the third party is the party of 'can't;' the Republican party is the party of 'can.'"
